

RED - TAILED HAWK

Introduction

What would you think if you saw something diving at you at 120 MPH! If the red tailed hawk is mad it will hold it's head and body upright. They make stick nests at the highest branch in a tree. The purpose of this document is to inform you about Red

www.learner.org

Young

A red tailed hawk lays 1-5 eggs in a week every other day for 28-35 days. Red tailed hawk eggs hatch 6 weeks after they

Habitat and food

A Red—Tailed Hawk likes desserts and open fields. It is a non migratory bird. They eat mice rabbits, squirrels, reptiles and other prey.

Description

A brownish red tail and a brown upper body. It's size is about 18 to 24 inches. It's wingspan is 3.8 to 4.3 inches and it weighs 24.3 to 51.5 lbs.

Conclusion

Now you know about red - Tailed Hawks. In conclusion the Red-Tailed Hawk is a strong predator. The reason I like the Red—Tailed Hawk is because it is a good fighter. I learned that they can dive at

Red tailed hawk